Herschel V. Johnson has asked whether impartial military commander is not ust of power, passion and prejudice. Take this proposition and it is a step to an empire. One impartial tyrant is better than a dozen petty despots.

This, however, rests upon the suppose tion that the present condition of affairs is to be continuous. If we once choose King Crane for a master, we poor frog will have to suffer, for, backed by a large army, he will be irresistlyle, and as cer tainly as Reme vielded to her Cesars, and France to the Napoleons, America will travel the same broad road to glory, perhaps, and certainly to ruin.

We would prefer, therefore, that for the present we should be ruled by the pro usuls of the Government, the department commanders. They are not quite as SLOBBERING IN HORSES.—A correspondent of the Boston Cultivator says that this is a disease in horses. Sattpeter—tablespoonful for a dose—he has found to cure the worst case he ever had, an has not found it necessary to give another dose. He gives a tablespoonful in the morning, and in three days, if not frefrom it, he gives another dose.

He beby a merchant in Philadelphia. He hegan farming four years ago, having about one inmidred acree of cleared land, for which he purchased twelve cows and two heifers. He engaged a farmer, who continued in charge two years, and made 1,432 pounds of butter the first year, and 1,500 the second year. This was principally from pasture alone, no provision having been made, by growing early rye, corn lodder or any other green food, to keep up a plentiful supply, either early or late in the season, when pasture is short, and it is so indispensable in order to keep up the condition of the cows and 'I am well satisfied that the condition of the cow, in order to obtain from her in full yield, or one that will be profitable, must at all three be well looked to. She must be well wintered und fed, so that when she comes out of the barnyard in the spring, after having calved, she is in good tesh, showing her keep, and the care taken of her, am not like what is too much the custom of the country, namely, dry cows, wintered on straw, and un slicher except it be the lec side of the barnard, until the calf is dropped, when it is too late for the poor in flesh cow to yield her full capacity.

"A cow should, at all times, when mitking, be fully supplied with meal; not stimulated to excess, however, for that would certainly produce reaction afterwards; but she must have a full and plential supply at all times of good food and water. For that purpose I have grown early ye to begin with luttle early season, before the grass Is sufficient to turn out on; then, after harvest, during the dry weather, when the pasturage becomes short, Hungarian grass, to be followed with corn sowed in drills for fodder, which, cut morning and evening, and fed to the stock whilst milking, tills than twice a day, and with the pasture,

During the last season, whilst it was necessary to soil with Hungarian grass and corn for lodder, we have also fed two quarts of a ship-stuff each night and morning, as we feel satisfied that, although the Hungarian grass and green corn will keep up the yield of milk, yet they will not alone make as much butter as a hill supply of pasture or the natural grasses.
